Market and Portfolio Developments

Market Review

Emerging Markets took a major hit in July as the Chinese government clampdown on certain industries and companies reverberated across markets. China 'A' markets were down 7.3%, and the broader emerging markets dropped 6.7% in sympathy. Global credit and Trend following were positive, mitigating some of the overall volatility.

Main contributors "What did well?"

Trend following saw gains by being positioned in upward trends in commodities and equity markets, highlighting the benefits of having an alternatives allocation as part of our portfolio. Over in fixed income, the more defensively positioned Global credit position also helped to offset some losses in the portfolio. Healthcare equities (part of the stability theme) was another positive contributor, performing as we expect in volatile markets. Positions in Europe equities also helped, as they were more resilient than EM positions, and continued to be supported by strong economic activity. The past month's contributors highlight the importance of diversification which is especially evident during market stress.

Main detractors "What underperformed?"

Concerns around the Chinese government clampdown caused contagion effects which led to meaningful declines in our China 'A' and Emerging Markets positions. Looking beyond near-term concerns, both markets continue to trade at reasonable valuations (in particular to the richly-valued DM markets) and where earnings are expected to continue to benefit from the ongoing global recovery. We also take comfort that Chinese policy markets have taken steps to calm investors more recently.

Portfolio activity

Amid market volatility, the focus was on maintaining the integrity of our portfolio allocations.

Market outlook

The litany of regulations imposed by the Chinese government is yet another of a string of events this year that has led to bouts of volatility and risk-off behaviour amongst investors. In such an environment, we continue to stick to our FVT process to invest in opportunities with better margin of safety and with better risk/reward – this results in a forward-looking portfolio that is expected to have higher future returns. Our long-time investors know that this may result in short-term deviations in performance to peers and benchmarks (which tend to be US heavy), but result in a more rewarding journey for us in the end.
