Instead of investing in flavour of the day concepts, the strategy focuses on structural characteristics that make sense and are backed by empirical research.

Factsheet 30th November 2021

Market & Portfolio Developments

Market Review

Asian equities were down 4.27% in November as the emergence of Omicron led to renewed anxiety that the economic recovery would be derailed. We are monitoring developments objectively, and remind investors not to pay undue emphasis on the negatives especially as there has also been some positive economic data i.e. China's PMI rose to 50.1 in November, signalling expansion.

Main Contributors 'What did well?'

Our strategy is guided by FVT principles to invest into a portfolio of stocks that are well diversified, and expected to complement each other. This approach played out well last month; during stress and sell off, investors tends to take a flight to quality, companies with profits became the outperformer in November. i.e. JD.com rose +7.45%.

Main Detractors 'What underperformed?'

Following a stretch of positive performance, our Small-cap and Value positions gave back some of the strong YTD gains on concerns over the newer COVID-19 Omicron variant. As explained in our latest market commentary, this reaction is a classic example of amplifying the bad and understating the good. On balance, these positions are expected to benefit from the broader economic growth which remains intact.

Outlook

With the continued regulatory crackdown by the Chinese government, and now fresh concerns over the new COVID-19 variant, financial markets are expected to remain volatile and unpredictable. Rather than trying to predict the short-term ups and down of the market, we continue to emphasize effective portfolio diversification across strategies with better FVT (Fundamental, Valuation, Technical). Having differentiated and complementary strategies that take turns to perform in the portfolio lead to a smoother journey and better outcome for our investors.
