Market & Portfolio Developments

Market Review

Asian equities ended May with marginal gains of 0.19%. A confluence of factors, including global inflationary pressures caused by supply chain disruptions and Russia's invasion of Ukraine, continued to weigh in on the region's performance. China remains largely in lockdown, but signs of an improving Covid situation eased some of the pressure as the Chinese government is on course to ease Covid curbs and gradually reopen the economy.

Main Contributors 'What did well?'

Our China names contributed positively to performance as increasingly supportive economic policies boosted sentiments around China's growth outlook, and where our FVT process guided our investments into names with attractive valuations. Such are the benefits of investing in areas with a better margin of safety that allows us to participate in areas with higher future returns at favourable risk-to-reward levels.

Main Detractors 'What underperformed?'

Small-Cap equities took a breather after enjoying a period of outperformance over the past few months. We continue to invest in Small-caps at better valuations as they shown to provide better performance over the market cycle.

Market Outlook

Where green shoots of recovery are present in China – a major economy in Asia – it has brought confidence to the region. As a result, we remain optimistic about the outlook on Asian equities and expect our Asian portfolio to benefit as countries reopen and spending and manufacturing activities pick up. But persistent inflationary pressure warrants the need to continue monitoring the region's growth outlook, and serves as a timely reminder of the need to diversify across differentiated and complementary strategies (i.e. Value, Small-Cap, and Momentum).
