Market & Portfolio Developments

Market Review

April saw declines across equity and bond markets. Notably, previously resilient segments (such as Brazil and Energy equities) were in the red with US equities being one of the worse performing markets this year. Bonds were not spared either having recorded their worst month on record.

Main Contributors 'What did well?'

Our Healthcare and Quality Value equities continued to prove valuable as part of our Stability Theme, having cushioned portfolio volatility and displayed stronger resilience to declines as compared to harder hit sectors such as technology and financials. Such are the benefits of True Diversification and highlighting the advantage of structuring portfolios across different favourable themes at any one time.

Main Detractors 'What underperformed?'

Emerging Market (EM) equities detracted from overall performance led by China names as uncertainty around 'Zero-Covid' restrictions remained. We are cautiously optimistic that better valuations, coupled with accommodative monetary and fiscal policies will be supportive for China and the broader EM markets going forward. US Small-Caps also saw declines around the high-growth segments amid a broader 'growth' sell-off in view of the Fed rate hikes.

Market Outlook

Questions surrounding the possibility of further decline and market crashes are naturally surfacing as we go through a period of extended declines. Here we remind investors that our Risk Mitigation strategy is in place to protect against significant market crashes that has the biggest negative impact to investors wealth. Accordingly, April's relatively moderate decline e.g. S&P 500 -8.7% did not trigger our 'airbag' - as a reminder, protection strategies that are designed to make small amounts of money with a high degree of certainty when the market is down are not cost effective, as most lose money over time. We continue to focus on maximizing protection during real crashes that are difficult to recover from, and remain optimistic that our FVT process will reward patient and bold (buy-the-dip) investors over the long-run.
